I would also like to thank our management, unions and staff for working alongside our customers and partners to tirelessly provide high standards of service, efficiency and reliability that has become the hallmark of PSA.”

Mr Tan Chong Meng, Group CEO of PSA International, said “We are very honoured to receive this vote of confidence. The shipping and ports industry continues to evolve with the upsizing of ships and the formation of mega alliances. Hardware and processes that have served us well previously need to be re-examined and advanced accordingly. PSA continues to explore the use of automation, intelligent technologies and systems to ensure best-in-class service for our shipping line customers. We will continue to explore innovative ways to build on the close cooperation we have with all our port stakeholders.”

The AFLAS Awards are designed to honour the respective winning organisations for demonstrating leadership as well as consistency in service quality, innovation, customer relationship management and reliability. At the end of last year, over 10,000 readers of Asia Cargo News, and a further 5,000 e-news subscribers, were asked to nominate the best service providers in the respective AFLAS Award categories. After a technical evaluation to ensure they matched the nomination criteria by Asia Cargo News, a final ballot was conducted where readers and industry clients were asked to select the winning companies. Thousands of shippers and industry experts have voted, making the results a true reflection of expertise in the Asian freight, logistics and supply chain industry.
